Student officers to attend Regents meeting

By BUDDY GIBSON

Plans to sell beer and wine on campus at UTD await action by the UT Regents during their summer meetings. The university will be well represented at the first meeting which takes place in Dallas this week. Administrators, faculty, and student government officers will attend on behalf of UTD. The UT Health Sciences Center is the location for the meeting to be held on June 16 and 17.

Student Congress has indicated its support for the plans after a poll showed that a majority of students favored the idea. Food Services and Student Activities compiled data on feasibility and profitability, as well as legal considerations. The measure is facing no opposition at this time, and a positive response is expected from the Regents.

Kimbell Smith and Peat Alford were also able to offer insights into areas of student interest. Now comfortably settled in their new positions as president and vice-president, they assure us that Student Congress presses on.

In response to students' requests, the Computer Center has expanded its hours to accommodate peak usage times. The center also reports that five new stations will be installed this summer, with five to 10 more arriving by fall.

A survey is just getting underway to determine if summer graduates want to have a ceremony with regalia. Early inputs indicate an affirmative response. Kim Smith emphasized that the traditions initiated by recent Student Congress administrations will be strongly supported.

Peat Alford is starting work on plans for a new course evaluation program. "Students that have suggestions or questions regarding the development of this problem should submit them to Student Congress," the vice-president stated.

Student government has also been active in forming a softball team that is expected to challenge a similar team from UT-Arlington, NTSU, and SMU before the summer is over. Call or come by the office for more information.

The student-faculty back-to-school party has been set for Sept. 15. A band will be hired, and your ideas for the event will be appreciated.

The fall election for Student Congress representatives is set for Sept. 19 and 20. Smith urges anyone who has an interest in student government or student life at UTD to inquire about one of these 24 positions. He commented that, "Although we've had a lot of good input, we'll need good people as well to put ideas into action."

Smith and Alford will represent the UTD students at Texas Student Association meetings, and at the American Student Association meeting in Washington, D.C. planned for this fall.

Responsible input on student problems or solutions to them are always appreciated by Student Government. The office is located in the Student Union, room 2.102, or call (690)2284.

Spring commencement returns to campus

Despite torrential rains the night before which threatened to wash out UTD's 1983 Spring Commencement, the ceremony took place as scheduled on the campus mall the morning of May 21.

Sunny skies prevailed as a near-capacity crowd convened for UTD's eighth Spring Commencement. Dr. Austin Cunningham, marshal, led university officials and degree candidates in an impressive procession, to the majestic accompaniment of the Festival Brass.

Dr. Dennis Kratz, speaker of the faculty, introduced the ceremony, and Dr. Robert Rutford, UTD president, welcomed the assemblage.

Speaker for the commencement was Dr. Lloyd M. Cooke, president of the National Action Council for Minorities in Engineering, Inc. (NACME, Inc.). A leader of a comprehensive program to increase the number of minorities in the field of engineering, Dr. Cooke also has served by Presidential appointment on the National Science Board and is a former Consultant to the Office of Technology Assessment, Congress of the United States.

In his address, Dr. Cooke observed that educational and professional opportunities in the 1980s greatly exceed those of past decades. He emphasized that graduates, having accomplished academic goals represented by their university degrees, have a responsibility to themselves and to society to make the most of the opportunities now available to them.

Dr. Cooke recalled that when he graduated at the head of his class at the University of Wisconsin, he was unable to secure even a job interview, due to the Depression and to restrictions in minority hiring.

By contrast, 30 years later he was employed as Director of University Relations for Union Carbide, supervising all recruitment activities.

Dr. Cooke stressed the importance of service to one's community and society.

"It is clear that in Texas, where the frontier system and spirit still prevail, each of you can see and comprehend the need to be an active participant to help insure delivery of essential human services in your communities," Dr. Cooke stressed.

"Carry on in the way which brought you to this glorious stage," he urged. "Remember that you have real responsibilities, opportunities, and special skills to deal with the present and next generations."

Following the address, Dr. Michael Gillespie, university orator, read the names of the graduates. Degrees were conferred in the sequence of bachelors, masters, and doctors of philosophy.

Estimates of the number of graduates participating in the ceremony included: 160 in Management and Administration, 44 in Human Development, 42 in Natural Sciences and Mathematics, 28 in General Studies, 36 in Arts and Humanities, and 33 in Social Sciences.

The spectrum of graduates included the youngest in UTD history and the second oldest. Jeanette Prasfika, 19, earned a Bachelor of Arts in Visual Arts degree. Henry DuBois, 70, earned a Bachelor of Arts in American Studies degree. Dr. Rutford announced that a $500 scholarship in DuBois' honor has been established by Jerry Lee and Nancy Holmes.

Addressing a near-capacity crowd, commencement speaker Dr. Lloyd Cooke urged students to remember their "real responsibilities, opportunities and special skills" to deal with the present and future.

(A list of spring graduates appears on pages 4-5 of this issue.)

Mercury is forum for UTD students

I am pleased to have this opportunity to introduce myself as the new editor of the UTD Mercury. I accepted this position because I feel that there is a great deal that I can do to make the Mercury more of a student-oriented paper. I'm now in the process of assembling a staff of people who are motivated, and who feel that they can contribute a few hours a week to producing a quality newspaper.

A knowledge of the newspaper business is not as important as a willingness to learn. Assignments are available for interviewing, general reporting, sports and specialty subjects, photography, and all aspects of layout and pasteup.

In the year that I've been attending UTD, I've heard many comments about the Mercury, the issues that it covers, the material that is not covered, as well as individual suggestions on how the paper can be improved. I expect to draw on all of this information, but that is only the beginning!

If we are to maintain a publication that is fresh and in touch with its readers, I need to have continuing feedback and support from those readers. That's YOU!! Please feel free to stop by our offices if there is something going on that we should know about. My office door is always open to discuss new ideas, or old complaints, about the Mercury. As always, we're happy to receive freelance writing, cartoons, or letters to the editor from UTD students.

Our office is located upstairs in the Student Union, 2.106. The office is usually staffed from 9 a.m. to 5 p.m., Monday through Friday. I also anticipate keeping the office open until 7 p.m. on Tuesday and Wednesday to be more accessible to night students. We look forward to hearing from you.

Father's Day prompts son's reflections

We were standing in your yard the other day and I was watching you fight that limb. You were using that old saw you must have fixed a hundred times. Despite the frailty of your equipment you never gave up. I wondered how many times in your life you've fought when others would have given up.

The toughest battles must have been the ones you and I had. They were so violent I knew if we didn't strangle each other, the grief would kill us. At times I felt imprisoned by your shadow, and I had to fight to see my own.

I often see people who have disagreements that are pale in comparison, yet seemingly strong enough to end communication between them. I don't understand how they can let the warmth of a close family slip away from them so easily.

On this Father's Day, I want to thank you for never shutting me out of your life. It was tough for both of us, but we persevered. I think we've won, Dad. I love you.

—DAVID KRAUSE

Open Letter to Faculty

Intrepid housewife embraces challenges of student life

(Editor's note: UTD Network, formerly Women's Support Association, is a campus organization addressing issues of concern to contemporary women and men. The following is an open letter submitted by UTD Network.)

Letter to UTD Professors:

This is a letter to introduce myself. I will be showing up in your classes and thought maybe I had better prepare you. From what I have heard from your previous students, there is reason to believe my reception may not be the warmest.

I am a housewife. I come with the highest recommendations. You see, I have been very good at whatever I attempted in the past. I am a very good housewife and this takes much ingenuity and imagination. For this reason I think it is possible that I may be good at whatever else I may attempt.

Due to my different socialization I have to offer a totally new and different perspective to whatever subject is approached in your classes. My perspective is not unique; it is shared by half the population but has not enjoyed equal representation in your studies. Once you have considered this, I am sure you will be interested in what I have to offer.

If I look a little bedraggled at class time it is probably because I had to wait until my family was asleep to do my studies and so did not get much sleep. I take my responsibility to my family seriously. My husband tries to understand and do his part, but he is not yet fully aware and does not yet share fully in the home responsibilities.

Women have been told for centuries that their place is in the home and everything else was man's responsibility. I am slowly working my way out of this and realizing that I don't have to believe it. I feel newborn. I want to create, discover and offer the insights I've gained from my life experiences. The thought that anyone might deny me this is too horrible to contemplate.

I am asking you not to ridicule and belittle me. Treat me with the respect I have earned. If you do not do this, I will wonder why. I will wonder that maybe it is fear—fear of the unknown. I too am afraid, but my excitement at the discovery of new worlds far exceeds this fear.

If I make comments which seem inappropriate or different from what you have experienced in the past, it may be because I am seeing things from a different angle. It is necessary to learn about all reality to have the whole truth. I am part of this reality. Do you fear knowing the whole of reality? Surely not.

Let us share this learning experience.

Yours truly and with love,
The Future

(If you have an idea for an article and/or would like to submit one on subjects regarding the issues of women and men, please submit them to the Women's Network mail drop in the Student Activities office, SU 2.202.)

Health Service staff thanks blood donors

The UTD spring bloodmobile drive sponsored by the Student Health Service on April 27 and 28 was a great success. During the drive 97 units of blood were collected and they have been credited to our blood club account. In addition, 23 potential donors had to be deferred for various medical reasons.

The staff at the Student Health Service and at Wadley Blood Services want to convey our thanks to all the students, faculty and staff at UTD for their generous donation to the UTD Blood Club. We hope to see all of you at our fall blood drive.

UTD's Phi Theta Kappa Chapter wins national, state awards

Special honors have been accorded recently to UTD's Iota of Texas, Phi Theta Kappa Alumni Chapter and its historian, Violet Cearley.

At the fraternity's sixty-fifth National Convention in Kansas City, MO, Iota chapter was presented an Award of Excellence. Only seven chapters from the national roster of 700 were so honored.

Ms. Cearley was named to the fraternity's prestigious Hall of Honor for Alumni members. She was one of 11 members so recognized at the national convention.

The accolades followed others earned at the fraternity's state convention in Galveston last March. At that time, the UTD chapter earned the Milestone and Communications awards honoring dedicated service during the past year. Ms. Cearley also earned the Most Distinguished Alumni Member Award and the Cliff Wood Distinguished Service Award, and was elected president of the Texas PTK Alumni Association for the coming year.

Phi Theta Kappa is the national honorary scholastic fraternity for outstanding two-year college students. Organized in 1918 by Missouri junior college presidents to recognize superior academic achievement, the fraternity has grown under the leadership of Executive Director Dr. Margaret Mosal to a record number of 700 chapters across the U.S., and in Samoa, Canal Zone, and Puerto Rico.

Phi Theta Kappa Alumni chapters at the university level work to ease the transition process for junior/community college members transferring to four-year institutions. Phi Theta Kappa alumni work for the goals of scholarship, leadership and service.

Sponsor of the UTD chapter is Susan Arnett, pre-admissions counselor; president is Dawn Dinger.

If you have a room or apartment for rent, are looking for a place to live, or are seeking a roommate to share your apartment or home, Student Government would welcome your visit to its offices to complete one of the new forms or review the file, so that you might find the situation best suited to your needs.

Special program honors academic achievements

The outstanding academic achievement of numerous UTD students during the 1982-83 college term was recognized the evening of May 20 at an Honors Convocation in the UTD Conference Center.

Honors graduates, students who had achieved induction in Who's Who in American Universities and Colleges, scholarship recipients, and others earning special awards during the academic year were recognized at the convocation.

Among those addressing the assembly were Dr. Robert Rutford, UTD president; Dr. Alexander Clark, vice president for Academic Affairs; and Dr. Lloyd M. Cooke, president of the National Action Council for Minorities in Engineering, Inc.

In his remarks at the convocation, Dr. Cooke referred to "calamitous descriptions" of the quality of education in the United States. However, he observed that "heroic" strides have been made in the last decade.

"Excellence is something that must become in the forefront in our search for new opportunity," Dr. Cooke stressed.

College masters representing six schools announced cum laude, magna cum laude, and summa cum laude graduates in their respective areas of study. (Honors graduates in the fall of 1982 were acknowledged in the Jan. 31 issue of the UTD Mercury; those graduating with honors in May of 1983 are recognized in the list of spring graduates beginning on this page.)

Special faculty achievements are recognized at term's end

While the recent Honors Convocation and Spring Commencement were occasions for the recognition of student achievement, awards and honors earned by UTD faculty members also were acknowledged at each event.

At the May 20 Honors Convocation, Dr. Alexander Clark, vice-president for Academic Affairs, announced that AMOCO Foundation Outstanding Teacher awards had been earned by Dr. Helen Reynolds, assistant professor of Social Sciences, and Dr. Kent Nielsen, associate professor of Geosciences.

Dr. Clark further announced that Dr. Debbie Vandell, associate professor of Psychology, has been named UTD's nominee for the Minnie Stevens Piper Foundation Professor Award, recognizing outstanding academic, scientific, and scholarly achievement and dedication to the teaching profession. During Spring Commencement ceremonies the morning of May 21, Dr. Clark announced four additional faculty awards.

Dr. Paul Monaco, associate professor of Arts and Humanities, has earned a Fulbright Senior Research Professorship to the Federal Republic of Germany.

Dr. Bert S. Moore, associate professor of Psychology, has been elected Fellow of the Division of Personality and Social Psychology of the American Psychological Association.

Dr. Robert X. Rodriguez, associate professor of Music, has been named Composer-in-Residence with the Dallas Symphony Orchestra on a grant from Exxon Corporation.

Dr. Hanna Ulatowska, associate professor in Communication Disorders, has been awarded a Senior Fellowship to the Academy of Science in Poland by the International Research Exchange Board.

Academic regalia traditions date back to medieval Europe

When the assemblage of UTD spring graduates donned caps, tassels and gowns on May 21, they continued a tradition dating back nearly eight centuries.

In medieval Europe all townspeople wore long flowing robes or gowns. The materials and colors varied, to reflect wealth and rank of the individual, and were governed by royal decree. Gradually distinctive gowns for various professions, trades and guilds developed. They survive today in the gowns of religious orders, the judiciary, and in academic regalia.

Students in such medieval universities as Oxford and Cambridge organized into guilds. Gradually their costume became distinctive for Bachelors (apprentices) of Arts, Masters (teachers) and Doctors (teachers who had completed postgraduate studies). The distinction was most obvious in the hood.

The hood derives from the cloak, which in medieval times was worn over the gown much like a modern overcoat. At first an attachment which could be pulled over the head for warmth, the hood inevitably became a separate article worn over the head and hanging far down the back.

When hats and caps became fashionable in the fifteenth century, the hoods became merely ornamental. Today color of the hood's outer trim indicates the degree earned; the color of the lining is that of the institution conferring the degree.

The academic cap developed later. First conferred as a symbol of the Master of Arts degree, the caps might be stiff or soft, square or round, some with a tuft in the center. Today's taste is an elaboration of the tuft. The mortar board style commonly seen in American regalia comes to us from Oxford.

University honors Dr. Kusch

In recognition of the continuing accomplishments as educator and citizen-scientist of Regental Professor Emeritus Polykarp Kusch, the Founders North Auditorium recently was dedicated in his honor.

A professor of physics at UTD from 1972-82, Dr. Kusch has enjoyed a distinguished career which earned numerous honors, among them the Nobel prize in physics for his research in the structure of the atom.

Dr. Kusch earned degrees from the Case School of Applied Science and the University of Illinois, and was affiliated for many years with Columbia University prior to joining the UTD faculty.

In addition to the Nobel prize, Dr. Kusch further has earned the Great Teachers Award; the Alexander Hamilton Medal from Columbia University; the AMOCO Foundation Outstanding Teacher Award, UTD; and the Illini Achievement Award from the University of Illinois.

Among the officials participating in the dedication were Dr. Robert H. Rutford, UTD president; Dr. Alexander L. Clark, vice president for Academic Affairs; Thomas B. Rhodes, Board of Regents, the University of Texas System; and Richard A. Caldwell, dean of the School of Natural Sciences and Mathematics.

At the dedication, Dr. Kusch was honored as a man "pursuing with new vigor, a long-time goal, to convince mankind that we live in a finite world whose resources are being used up at a disturbing rate."

Free service enables students to sharpen academic skills

By BUDDY GIBSON

Are good grades important to you? Then check out the Learning Tools Shop this semester.

Started in mid-March, the program is designed to help build study skills related to reading, note-taking, writing, and selecting books. One-to-one assistance is available, or a student may check out a variety of publications about becoming a better student.

The program is sponsored by the Study Skills Center, and will be held twice a week on Mondays and Thursdays. Not a remedial workshop, the program will offer even the most experienced student means of improving skills.

Other services provided include tips on studying, time management, concentration, and exam-taking. No appointment is required, and students are encouraged to come in and browse through the available materials.

The Study Skills Center is open weekdays on a walk-in basis. Also, Dr. Paula Grinnell, director of Learning Services, remains available for consultations by appointment. She is assisted by staff members Karen Romson, Kathy Callahan, and Learning Specialist Donna Rodgers.

For details, call the Skills Center at (690)2746, or visit the office in McDermott 3.228.

Mexican, '50s Theme Days to liven summer session

As the old song by Martha and the Vandellas proclaimed, "Summer's here and the time is right"—for campus Theme Days!

Thanks to the ingenuity of Food Services and Student Activities, the summer session will be brightened by a Mexican Fiesta, set for Wednesday, June 29; and a Fabulous Fifties day, planned for Thursday, July 14.

No Mexican fiesta would be complete without terrific food, and Food Services is pleased to comply! The cafeteria will serve "Fiesta Steak," cheese enchiladas, tacos, nachos, Spanish omelettes and a chicken tortilla casserole. Across campus in the Student Union grill, burritos, chili rellenos, and a "South of the Border Burger" will be the order of the day.

Music will be provided by Graciela and Paul, and winner of the "Frijole Sweepstakes" (the person whose guess of the number of beans in the jar is most accurate) will be rewarded with dinner for two at Al Vera's Mexican Restaurant.

The Fabulous Fifties theme day brings back all the old favorites—hoola hoop and Twist contests, slip'n'slide, a Volkswagen jam-a-thon (how many crazy people can pile into that car?), and—of course—lots of rock'n'roll. Where food is concerned, the price is right! Hamburgers and watermelon will be just 25¢; Coca-Cola, just a nickel.

For more details about UTD Theme Days, watch for announcements posted across campus; or, call Student Activities at (690)2945.

Is your ID card valid?

New and returning students whose identification cards were not validated during registration are advised to come to the Student Activities Office to ensure validation. Green fee receipts are required for validation. In order to use the library, physical instruction courts and equipment, and many other campus facilities, validated student ID's are required.

"This mini theatre-in-the-round will provide a unique opportunity for the audience to experience Shakespeare with an intimacy not readily available in most productions," Ms. Gillespie explained. Informal seating will be provided on carpeted levels surrounding the circular stage area. The production will be the first-time full-scale staging effort for the "Pit" area by the UTD theatre program.

Four children will be included in the cast, including Jeremy Snyder as the Prince of Sicilia,
