Were you one of the many people who were left hot and thirsty with no place to go last week? Here's the scoop. Coca-Cola is out, Dr. Pepper is in; it's as simple as that, or is it? Many students are upset at the soft drink choices in the new machines and it appears that diet colas are sorely missed.

Student Congress elections are less than a week away now. Since most of us can only express our views by voting, let's not miss this opportunity! If you would like to see things get done on campus . . . get out and vote!!

While we're on the subject of Student Government, don't forget the "Welcome" party that they have scheduled for Thursday, Sept. 15 from 3 to 6 p.m. and from 7 to 10 p.m. A jazz band will perform at the early part, and a rock band will perform the other hours. Cool ones will be available, so come on out, make some new friends, and have a good time!!

On the third page of this issue is a schedule of presentations to be made by various campus organizations. Take note of these services and try to utilize all of them that you find helpful. You pay for these activities whether you use them or not.

A special thanks to the crew who cleaned up the disgusting graffiti on the bridge. It still needs some work though.

And finally, a heartfelt thank-you and best wishes to Amanda Ridings, our recently departed staff advisor. Her help and guidance will be missed in this office for some time to come. With that we'll wrap up this issue; hope to hear from you soon!!

Non-discrimination Policy: "It is the policy of The University of Texas at Dallas that no person shall be excluded from participation in, denied the privileges of, or be subject to discrimination under, any program or activity sponsored or conducted by the university on any basis prohibited by applicable law, including but not limited to, race, age, color, national origin, religion, sex, or handicap. In addition, the university will not discriminate against disabled veterans or veterans of the Vietnam Era.

Advertising is accepted by UTD MERCURY on the basis that there is no discrimination by the advertiser in the offering of goods or services to any person, on any basis prohibited by applicable law. Evidence of discrimination will be the basis of denial of advertising space. The publication of advertising in UTD MERCURY does not constitute an endorsement of products or services by the newspaper, or The University of Texas at Dallas, or the governing board of the institution.

Flourish or flounder?

Mercury begins fourth year

little different with this issue of the Mercury? Go on, pick it up and shake it around, rub it between the index finger and thumb of your dominant hand. What's that you say? It doesn't feel right, seems a little light! You're right, it is a little lighter than usual. As a matter of fact, it's only half of its normal weight.

Believe it or not, there is a good reason for this phenomenon. You see folks, it's only half a normal paper this time. Oh, we've got the normal ads, masthead. PR releases, and graduate lists that a "good" student publication should have. Yet, we only have 4 pages, and the reason is we felt this would be a good way to editorialize about the support the Mercury gets from various groups on campus.

Since this is a student publication, let's get down on you auvs first.

Why don't you support our advertisers? It's quite embarassing to go out as a student representative of the school and have to admit that, yes, there is quite a bit of apathy on campus. We try to sell advertising on the basis that the paper is a young organ of student expression, and is showing steady improvement each year. However, until the students buy from these people, advertisers will continue to cancel their ads.

This is a student publication, not Buddy and Dave's personal toy. There are over 7,000 students on this campus. Obviously, there aren't that many of you interested in journalism or you would be at one of the area schools with a journalism department.

However, we are constantly stopped by students on campus and asked what we intend to do about the long lines at registration, or the exorbitant prices at the bookstore, or the apparent lack of concern by the administration about availability of classes for daytime students

We would love to cover all these issues, but we can't do it all ourselves. If you're interested in voicing your opinions about these things we'll give you all the help we can. We'll walk you through the process, but you have got to be willing to take some steps on your own. Let's face it, folks, we're no more professional journalists than any of you.

Our main interest is improving the Mercury just a little for those who take over after us. Remember, this is a student newspaper, and we all need to give a little, even if it is only to or buy from an advertiser and tell them where you saw the ad.

On to the faculty whom we often hear from more than the students. You are one of the most vital resources we have as a student paper. You provide us with all the information at your disposal when it is something you'd like us to publicize.

You jump down our throats when we don't give proper or timely attention to your pet projects. But, if we are covering a story in the students' interests, such as the reorganization of the accounting program, we get a lot of no comments or blank looks or off-the-records.

We would love to review plays produced by the drama department, but we need you to help us recruit people who could adequately review your programs based on a decent knowledge of the theater or Business instructors could encourage their students to get some needed hands-on experience by selling advertising, billing accounts, keeping records, handling business correspondence, planning ad layout, etc.

Staff is a 50-50 proposition. On the one hand, some people on the staff give us a tremendous amount of help and encouragement. They stop by and say great issue, I like what you're doing with the Merc, or who cares about that garbage you guys write anyway?

Then there is another group of staff who can best be described as typical bureaucrats. They've been here forever, and they just don't give a damn about helping you out. The more important it is that you get something by such-andsuch a date the less chance you have of getting it.

We now address that honorable body, the university administration. Being student journalists with slightly leftward-leaning political philosophies tends to put us at odds with an administration that has demonstrated a lack of cooperation at almost every step.

To this point we have been more or less restrained in our dealings with this group. However, it's time that some issues are addressed.

We are in a productionoriented business vis-a-vis the Student Government's service orientation. It would seem we would be given priority over that body when it comes to things like typewriters and other production-type equip-

Yet, Student Government has had self-correcting typewriters stop by and offer suggestions & for months and we labor away on the outdated Selectric II. Attempts to uncover the reason for this have left us with very unsatisfactory answers.

Along the same lines, we have had to beg for a paid student staff assistant with no response except, "It's coming."

While we're on the topic of hired staff, one of those positions is the position of Adviser. Amanda Ridings submitted her resignation in early August, effective Sept. 1. It was just a little over one week ago that interviews began to replace her.

The only incident which saw quick action by the administrators was in response to the first issue of the current newspaper staff in early June. In a story about Student Government, mention was made of attempts to sell beer and wine on campus. The story was backed by various reliable sources, but when the story hit, Dr. Rutford was on the phone questioning the student body president within hours.

The top administrator was correct in his assertion that the proposal had never crossed his desk. A recheck of our sources. confirmed that they had been told by another top administrator the issue was to be acted upon soon.

This same administrator insisted we publish an immediate follow-up to this issue in order to give adequate coverage to the topic of beer and wine sales on campus. We had already talked to every reliable source except the administration, leaving only Sandra Budreck and Robert Rutford as untapped sources. These same administrators who had insisted upon a clarification, refused to discuss the issue before our deadline, making it impossible to develop the story any further.

It appeared as though we were sorely lacking in credibility, when all we really lacked was experience. Given that, the story would have been much more forceful, and the apparent stonewalling would have been plain for all to see.

In summary, this publication is the voice of the students and has a responsibility to them to cover issues of interest. The funds are provided so they may informed. We are the voice of the students. Please help us do that effectively.

Student Congress election

Wednesday, Sept. 14, at 5 p.m. is the deadline to file for the UTD Student Congress election to be held Sept. 19-20.

The Student Congress consists of 24 representatives, with two graduate and two undergraduate reps from each of the six schools of study. The majority of candidates in the election can expect little or no opposition from current members since most have graduated.

The Student Congress meets every other week. Representatives elected will serve until next fall, if they attend all three terms. The regular meeting time for the Student Congress will be set by the newly-elected representatives and is expected to be at a time of day mutually convenient to all members.

To register, fill out the form below and bring it by the Student Government office in room 2.102 of the Student
