

Feet!

A potentially serious problem has recently come to our attention. It involves an alleged male student's harassment of women in the library. The 'blonde, stocky, clean-cut man in his mid-20's usually approaches female students in McDermott. Most often he will explain quite convincingly that he is a pre-med student interested in podiatry and would like them to complete a survey for one of his courses. He goes on to tell the woman that another part of his project involves being able to identify the bones and muscles of the foot and that he needs volunteers to let him examine their feet. Of the three incidents brought to our attention one woman turned him down immediately and one foot "inspection" was without incident. But the third incident abruptly ended when the man began kissing his surprised volunteer's feet.

This man's "project" is not limited to UTD. One of the women reports having been approached a second time last December in Fondren Library at SMU. The idea of having a blatant foot fetisher on campus may leave you laughing, but we would like to see these incidents stop before they become even more serious.

If you are approached by this individual, we suggest you contact campus security.